

Construction Law 101

Program Overview

Every construction project has inevitable “land mine” risks: jobsite injuries, cost overruns, delays, unforeseen conditions, design issues and change order disputes and defective work. The keys to successfully managing these risks are to gain a thorough understanding of the key contract clauses which address these risks, as well as understand how the law will govern disputes in connection with such risks. This seminar will provide an overview of the key contract clauses addressing the “land mine risks” on a project, as well as a discussion of the relevant construction law which will govern such disputes. The goal will be to learn how to negotiate and mitigate such risks, but also gain both legal and practical advice on how to manage such risks in the field and during the course of a project.

Who Sould Attend? Executive Management, Project Managers, Assistant PM’s, Superintendents, Project Engineers, Management, Estimators, Procurement Managers

Learning Objectives
