

CAF & DSV Construction Law Series

Indemnification, Insurance, Bonding and Safety

A Multi-Part Series on Legal Concepts for Construction Contractors

Construction work can be a tricky and dangerous business. Contractors perform a variety of trades and scopes that carry different levels of inherent risks. Failure to plan and financially protect oneself against these risks can have the potential to result in substantial financial and physical harm to both the contractor and the party for whom the contractor is working. Therefore, many projects require contractors to carry an insurance policy, a surety bond, or in some cases, both. There are often misunderstandings amongst contractors regarding exactly what the two of these are, why they are required, and how they differ. These misunderstandings can result in financial disaster, including the complete bankruptcy of the company and personal liability for their owners, so it's crucial to be educated about these products. This CAF Professional Development course will help you minimize the legal risks to your company and make sure you are prepared for all possible outcomes.

Who Should Attend? Executive Management, Project Managers, Assistant PM's, Field Supervision, Project Engineers, Management, Estimators, Procurement Managers.
