

CAF & DSV Construction Law Series

Construction Contract Payment Terms and Remedies

A Multi-Part Series on Legal Concepts for Construction Contractors

Getting paid for work performed on a construction project is obviously one of the most important issues for all parties involved in each project. Most contracts contain provisions relating to progress and final payments, retention, withholding payments for defective work, delays, liens or payment bond claims, suspension of work, and termination of the contract. All of those provisions can, in one way or another, affect when and how much you may be paid under your contract. Delays in receiving payment erode profitability and it can mean disaster if the unpaid amount is large and the delay is long.

This CAF Professional Development course will help understand the construction law relating to payment terms and remedies for the construction contractor.

Who Should Attend? Executive Management, Project Managers, Assistant PM's, Field Supervision, Project Engineers, Management, Estimators, Procurement Managers.
